Persimmons and possums are ripe.

The leaves are falling and fall is leaving.

Circuit Court next week. The docket is published on our first page.

Mr. Louis Miller fired his kiln of brick in Arcadia the first of this week.

The new parsonage in Arcadia is about completed and will be ready for occupancy in a few days.

"$3 a day and roast beef." Gentlemen, we have started long enough on the promise. Now feed us for a while with the reality.

We learn that Mrs. Harford, W. C. T. U., made a very lively political speech in the Presbyterian church last Sunday evening.

The "River" Base Ball Club defeated a picked-up nine from the Valley last Saturday afternoon at Arcadia in a score of 21 to 12.

The Street Commissioner has been making some commendable improvements on the culverts on the corner of Main and Madison streets.

If blood-red sun, flying dust, shifting winds, and lots of smoke from forest fires, make Indian Summer, why then the aboriginal season is here.

Wild ducks have been plentiful during the past week, and we hear of one sportsman who succeeded in securing twenty-eight of "teal" species in a single day.

Gunn's Ideals are thinking of visiting our city in the near future. This will be remembered as the troupe that filled a week's engagement in our city last April.

Mr. Maschmeyer, Pilot Knob, offers his store for sale or rent. It is a good business stand—one of the best in the town—and we have no doubt his terms are reasonable.

Rev. A. Montgomery, the new pastor of the Presbyterian Church, is expected to arrive some time this week, and will hold services next Sunday morning and evening.

Governor Francis last Tuesday appointed Prof. A. P. Vance School Commissioner of Iron County, vice John B. Scott, resigned.

An excellent appointment and one that will give eminent satisfaction to the whole of the county.

"Conscientious scruples" having succumbed, we presume, to the allurements of mammon the "Six-Day Shop" is now but a sacred memory of the past. Last Sunday was the day of its transformation into a Seven-Day Shop.

Now approacheth the season when he who owns a big wood-pile becomes a public benefactor. Unlike beaver, his favors descend only upon the unjust, and behold neither his right nor his left hand knoweth the recipients thereof.

The third quarterly meeting services of the M. E. Church will be held Saturday evening at 7, and Sunday morning at 10:30, conducted by the presiding elder.

O. M. MARTIN, P. E.

C. E. HATTON, P. C.

Mrs. Harford, State Organizer of the W. C. T. U., delivered two lectures in this place on Sunday last. In the afternoon at the M. E. Church and at night in the Presbyterian Church. Fair sized audiences were in attendance at both occasions.

In last week's paper noting the new time-table which went into effect on the 13th inst. we stated that the only important change was in the time of No. 753. We were mistaken. No. 752 arrives one hour later than formerly and is now due here at 3:31 A. M.

We are informed that N. P. Guffey's fine Durham Bull, which at seven months of age cost $100, will be sold at public auction at the courthouse on October 28th, the first day of Circuit Court. Also, two cows. Would-be owners of the stock will find it to their advantage to attend.

The big mining suit of Whitehead vs. Begley was argued in the Supreme Court last week by Judge Emerson on behalf of Mr. Begley. It involves a half interest in the Begley Iron mine lying east of town. Judge E. does not entertain any doubt but the court will decide in Mr. Begley's favor.

W. R. Edgar, Receiver of the U. S. Land Office here, went to Springfield Monday, in answer to a subpoena from Judge Phillips' court. He will probably return this week, although there's no certainty. A Federal Court, when it gets you, keeps you till it's done with you. Mr. E. is witness in timber-cutting cases.

The continued and bitter contest over the Prentiss post-office was terminated last week by Dr. S. A. Bates receiving his commission as postmaster. It will be remembered that Dr. Bates was appointed some months since, but that his commission has been withheld pending an examination of charges filed against the appointee.

The attendance at the Ironton public schools this year has been regular and full. This is the end of the second month, and the average attendance gets close to the maximum. This is very conclusive evidence that the schools are effective and prosperous, and that the patrons and pupils in full accord with the management and teachers.

We are sorry to learn that a steady reduction in the force employed by the Syntex Granite Company has been going on for some weeks past, and unless some new contracts are soon received it is said the works will close down entirely. The granite market is fair for the time of year, but the S. G. Co. has been unfortunate in securing no extensive contracts.

The Man About Town.

The publisher of the REGISTER has been guilty of a breach of confidence. Little did I imagine a couple of weeks since when he asked me for my photograph to what purposes he intended using the same. Observers of this column in last week's paper will have noticed how he has employed personal friendship to attain business ends. I refer to the printing of my likeness at the head of this department in the REGISTER of last week. While I do not especially object to favoring every subscriber of this paper with my counterfeits, I must say that I do not care to appear in the light of forcing my "good looks" on the public. Then again another inconvenience arising from this indiscreet and unauthorized move of the publisher is that my mail, for the past week, has been burdened with letters—written on scented paper and enclosed in square envelopes—from young females who are taken with my inspiring appearance and desire to make my acquaintance. "With a view to candy, bonbons, etc., later on." Having no private secretary, but being compelled to do all my own writing, a number of these charming epistles have to remain unanswered, and I doubt not that many of the enchanting creatures who wrote them are even now on the verge of despair because of my seeming indifference and neglect. This, I trust, will reassure them, and just as soon as their letters are reached, in regular turn they will receive autograph replies. Let me state, however, that this will take no little time for 'tis no easy matter for a man of forty to frame sentences that will sound pleasing alike to the young girl of fifteen as well as the vivacious lady of forty-five.

"D." your Pilot Knob correspondent, fears that I have confounded Mason and Dixon's line with that of the Missouri compromise. I wondered, as I penned the sentence which he criticizes, if some school teacher or other technical man wouldn't hasten to inform me that Mason and Dixon's line was local to the east and touched none of the western states. However, as 'tis a generally accepted term to distinguish between the North and South, I made use of it on account of the fact that I am a newspaper writer which is now generally considered far more extensive than that accorded to the poet. As I should have thought Mr. D.'s experience would have already taught him, the newspaper correspondent has not the time to be pedantic.

The story of the Kansas real estate man which I printed a couple of weeks since, has brought forth the experience of another of our real estate men with a foreign land dealer. The sharper in this story is a resident of Kansas City and his methods fully show that the inhabitants of the "Town on the Kaw" do not inhale the breezes from the bleeding State for naught. I will give the narrative in the words of my informant. "I see you have an item telling the experience of one of our fellow townsmen with a Kansas real estate man. Well, I have just had a round with a Kansas City man, and I believe I can give you a story fully as interesting as the one that lately appeared in the REGISTER. A couple of months since I received a letter from a man by the name of Fuller, of Kansas City asking me to send him a hundred acres of land. I did so, offering him the land at fifty-five cents. A few days later I heard from him again, saying that the location of the land was satisfactory, for he wanted to forward the abstracts and deeds to the Citizens' National Bank of that City, where he would examine them, and if the title proved all right he would send me a check for the amount. I promptly expressed my doubts and asked to speak to some of my correspondents. I had a closed sale—as there was no question about my title to the land. Several days passed, though, and I heard nothing from my man. Still, I was not uneasy and merely inferred that the party was taking his time to attend to the matter. Imagine, if you can, my surprise a few days later, when our Recorder came to me with a deed, which he had just received for record from Kansas City, conveying four hundred acres of the land involved in my trade and still belonging to me, to a third party for the consideration of $4500. About this time I received a letter from another Kansas City man telling me that he was about to purchase some land in this country and asking me to report on a forty-acre tract the numbers of which he furnished me. On examination I found that this forty-acre tract was also of my seventy hundred acre tract, and abstracted from it. I wrote to Kansas City Bank. I replied at once warning the party not to purchase as the land belonged to me and a title coming from any one else was not worth the paper it was written on. Two or three days afterwards the man brought me an answer from the man, thanking me for my timely advice, and stating that the party who had tried to sell him the land had that day disposed of it to another individual, receiving therefor a wagon and span of good horses. On receipt of this information I at once wrote to one of my correspondents in Kansas City, asking him to let me know something about Fuller's business, general reputation, etc., and to endeavor to ascertain to whom it was the transfer of 400 acres for $4500 had been made. The reply stated that Fuller's character was questionable, that the transfer of four hundred acres had been made to one of his "pals," and it was more than likely that the big consideration named therefor was designed only to secure purchasers for the remaining 200 acres. Of course, I never received the money for my land, and the other day the deed was returned to me by the bank. Fuller had taken the abstracts, obtained the numbers of the land therefrom, and made out his deeds to any he could 'guilt' into buying. I have no doubt that in the course of a few more weeks deeds for the whole of the seven hundred acres will be sent here for record. Of course these deeds convey no title whatever, but every such transaction results in giving a new lease of life to the old cry of 'Southeast Land Swindle,' and thus again are we the victims of the enterprising (but unscrupulous) 'D.'"

Talks on Educational Matters.

ENGLISH LANGUAGE—COMPARATIVE PHILOLOGY.

And gladly would he learn and teach.—CHAUCE.

Under the above head we propose to discuss from time to time various educational subjects. This communication is devoted to a few observations on the English language and its relation to other languages. In our next we shall talk to the teachers of the county and the patrons of our public schools in general. The study of the English language is not only a study of the tribes and nations which at different times left India and traveled westward, but it also shows us the extent of the commerce of English-speaking states. And more particularly does it tell us that our English of to-day is the descendant and direct heir of Anglo-Saxon. The Lord's prayer in O. E., as it was read by the people in the days of good King Arthur and Edward the Confessor, is as follows:

Feder ure, thu the earht. Our Father, thu who art on heofen, Si thin nama in heven, Hallowed be geholod. To be-cume thy name. Thy kingdom come. Geowor the domes. Wrought be ge-will this willa earhtan, swa will on earht even as in hean on heofen. True heven and half-Geard dæghwamlican bliþ sylle us give us to-day, and for-to-day. And forgyt us give us our gyltas, sinas are gyltas, swa swa we for-geve our gyltas, ge-lath urum gylten-dæm. And lead not thou us into the gese-gate, into coot-comptation, our looses us munge, alyas us of ylle of evil. Forsooth. Sothlice.

Such was the form in which the English people read the Scriptures in those days. But, like a good purveyor, our English has enriched itself by borrowing from other languages, not only words, but parts of words, and in doing so made some rather curious formations. As the word "bigamy," which is neither good Latin, good Greek nor good English, but half Latin and half Greek. Dignus would have been in harmony with "polygamy" and "monogamy," and would have been altogether Greek; but perhaps it would have been too suggestive. The English language is an odd mixture, yet, notwithstanding this, it is purely Teutonic, and is therefore of Aryan stock, which latter is one of the three or four original families of languages. (1.) The Scandic, which includes the Assyrian, Hebrew and Arabic. (2.) The Hebraic, which includes the Egyptian and Hottentot. (3.) The Aryan or Indo-European, called by the latter name from its having spread over Europe and from its old home in Asia; called Aryan from the Sanskrit word Arya—"honorable," "of good repute." But lest we should boast of this name, we must bear in mind that it was customary for tribes to give themselves high-sounding names, as the Chinese do to this day. The Aryans of Europe became divided into six great tribes: (1.) The Celts, who settled in Galatia, Spain, Italy, Germany, Gaul and the British Isles, including Ireland. (2.) The Romanic, which includes the Latin nations. (3.) The Grecians. (4.) The Teutons. (5.) The Sclaves. (6.) The Lithuanians. The name "Teuton" means the people, and the word "Sclav" suggests the slave. All outside were considered barbarians. The Teutons were divided into three divisions, Low Germans, Scandinavians and High Germans; and the English language ranks as one of the children of the Low German, which comprises Gothic or old Saxon, i. e., the Saxon of Germany. The English (under which is included Anglo-Saxon, lowland Scotch, modern English and the various dialects.) The Frisian, (which is the nearest to our English;) and last of all the Dutch and Flemish. This plainly shows us that all language is clearly related, and tells us of the unity or oneness of the human race. An illustration showing how close our relations are may be useful. In German, Ich habe mein haus, (I have my house), and in Frisian the connection is still closer, Ik haw myn huse. What news? (what news?) How, myne moeder, is het zoo late? (how, my mother, is it too late?) "No philologist," says Sir Wm. Jones, "can examine the Sanskrit, Greek and Latin without believing them to have sprung from a common source." And Baring-Gould tells us that all our folk-lore and fairy tales are the common property of the nations of Europe and Asia and another philologist tells us that they are all over the world, and came from India, the cradle of the human race. Hence a student finds that the language which he speaks, which he loves passionately—is so isolated, but has a relationship all over the world; yet goes beyond its kin and is connected with the original families of tongues and was present at the very "origin of nations." He will also find that kindred languages (blood will tell) even though thousands of years have passed since they were together, are more closely united than the languages of distant families though living in adjoining countries. For instance the Celtic, (though to-day spoken in the west of Ireland, highlands of Scotland and Wales) and the Sanskrit, (now dead, and when first spoken it was in the mountains and valleys of India), have an infinitely closer connection than Russian and Finnish, German and Hungarian, Greek and Hebrew; and during the last century, when the British soldiers were encamped in Britain, the Welsh soldiers had no difficulty in making themselves understood. In some future communication I will endeavor to develop this subject more fully, showing some of the foreign elements in English and how they came to us.

Tribute of Respect.

HALL OF IRON POST, No. 346, G. A. R., DEPARTMENT OF MISSOURI.

IRONTON, Mo., Oct. 22d, 1889.

Commander and Comrades—Your committee beg to report the following as a tribute of respect to our late Comrade, Ferdinand Kolb. He whose death we mourn, was born at Waechtersbach, Hessen, Germany, May 9th, 1848. Enlisted as a private in Co. "C," 2nd Regt. of Mo. Vol. Infy., June 25th, 1862, at the age of 14 years, and served with honor and bravery until his discharge as corporal, June 26th, 1865. Was mustered as a member of this Post September 12th, 1880, and died October 11th, 1889, aged 41 years, 5 months and 2 days, and was buried in regular form by Iron Post, No. 346, G. A. R., October 13th, 1889, at Pilot Knob cemetery, followed by the largest funeral procession Ironton has witnessed for years. By his death this Post has lost a faithful and beloved comrade; one whose heart was full of kindness, generosity and patriotism; a brave soldier who knew no fear, of the purest integrity, an efficient officer, ever ready and prompt in the discharge of duty, or to serve a friend. Comrade Kolb leaves two sisters and four brothers, besides a host of friends who, in appreciation of his honesty, faithfulness and true soldierly courage and goodness of heart, mourn his loss. And while this Post is deprived of his cheerful presence, it is our sad privilege and duty to cherish in our heart a fond recollection of the fraternal greetings and social intercourse of the past with our departed comrade. This Post hereby expresses its profound sorrow at the loss of the Grand Army of the Republic and its status in the hands of Comrade Kolb, and hereby tender to his brothers and sisters our kindly sympathies and sincere condolence.

Resolved, That an engraved copy of the foregoing, under the seal of this Post, be forwarded to his sister, Mrs. C. F. Schmitz, and a copy to the IRON COUNTY REGISTER.

Colored Society Notes.

Rev. McCallister and family were visiting friends in Caledonia last week. They came home well pleased with the kind reception which they received during their stay.

I notice that they have a "Flying Dutchman" at the school house; and you bet the children keep it going and get lots and lots of fun out of it.

Clement Garrett, a colored student of Harvard, was recently elected Class Orator, having received a majority of the 270 votes cast. Garrett is an honored member of the Senior Class.

G. A. Maston has leased the controlling interest in his barber shop to Charles Crozier. G. A. will assist Crozier on Saturdays and on other days when he is absent.

Primus Brennum recently made a profession of religion, on a sick bed, and was baptized by Rev. McCallister. They say that it is "never too late to do good." I wonder if that is true?

Messrs. Ellis Case, of Poplar Bluff, and George Johnson, of St. Louis, were visiting in Ironton Sunday.

Mrs. O. H. Hartman is at home on a visit.

Rev. Grant, of the A. M. E. Church, was visiting in Ironton recently. He is in charge of the Caledonia and Farmington Circuits.

Mitchel McFadden has moved his family to Leper. His property in Ironton is for rent.

Moses Lax recently sold his mule and a colt to Mr. Langdon.
